THREE MEN SHOT.

Italian Laborers Wound Husbands Wh

. Paul, June 9.-A battle was fought with pistols and shotguns late Sunday between three men on one side and about thirty Italians employ ed in a camp on the Chicago Great Western road, at the end of the Concord street car line, resulted in the serious injury of four men, one of whom will die.

A. Roberge is shot in the abdomen and face and will die.

M. Marcotte, Minneapolis, is shot in the hands and chest. His injuries are not serious.

Fred Wayman is wounded in the abdomen, but is expected to recover. Jose St. Dore, an Italian laborer, has several wounds on his face and it is thought he will loose his eye

The Italians, it is said, had been drinking during the day and when Mr. and Mrs. Roberge, Mr. and Mrs. Marcotte and Mr. Wayman passed he camp after a fishing trip some of he laborers who were lounging on ground made disrespectful remarks about women. Robertge and Marcotte understood the insults spoken in Italian and answered.

A pistol shot was fired and immediately followed by several others. The Italians hid themselves in the ditch they had been digging, barricaded themselves behind trees and camp buildings and from their position of vantage began a fusillade of shots.

The shooting ceased for a while, and witnesses say some laborers ran into the camp building and one of them fired three shots from a shotgun. Each shot brought down a man, Roberge, Marcotte and Wayman, falln the street and the shooting ceased

The police arrested twenty of the Italians and twelve were detained at the police station for investigation.

THREE MEN SHOT.

Italian Laborers Wound Husbands Who Protected Their Wive st. Paul, June 9.-A battle was fought with pistols and shotguns late Sunday between three men on one side and about thirty Italians employ ed in a camp on the Chicago Great Western road, at the end of the Concord street car line, resulted in the serious injury of four men, one of whom will die.

A. Roberge is shot in the abdomen and face and will die.

M. Marcotte, Minneapolis, is shot in the hands and chest. His injuries are not serious.

Fred Wayman is wounded in the abdomen, but is expected to recover. Jose St. Dore, an Italian laborer, has several wounds on his face and it is thought he will loose his eye-

The Italians, it is said, had been drinking during the day and when Mr. and Mrs. Roberge, Mr. and Mrs. Marcotte and Mr. Wayman passed the camp after a fishing trip some of the laborers who were lounging on the ground made disrespectful re-marks about women. Robertge and Marcotte understood the insults spok-marcotte understood the insults spoken in Italian and answered.

A pistol shot was fired and immediately followed by several others. The Italians hid themselves in the ditch they had been digging, barricaded themselves behind trees and camp buildings and from their position of vantage began a fusillade of shots.

The shooting ceased for a white

The shooting ceased for a while, and witnesses say some laborers ran into the camp building and one of them fired three shots from a shot gun. Each shot brought down a man, Roberge, Marcotte and Wayman, fallin the street and the shooting cease

The police arrested twenty of the Italians and twelve were detained at the police station for investigation.

A Quick Witted Dector

A certain French surgeon, of whom The Young Ladies' Journal tells, had so much more thought for his patient than for his own safety on one eccasion that he resorted to an expedient which although efficacious, might have resulted in his own death.

He had been commissioned to bleed the and seignior and either through umidity or nervousness had met with an awkward accident. The point of the lancet broke off in the vein, and the blood would not flow.

That point must be got out somehow. Without stopping to consider the conhis highness a violent slap in the face. This produced the desired effect, for surprise and indignation on the part of his august patient put the blood into violent circulation. The vein bled freely, and the lancet point came out.

The bystanders were about to lay hands on the surgeon when he said, "First let me finish the operation and bandage the wound." This done, he threw himself at the feet of the sultan and explained his action.

The sultan not only pardoned him, but gave him a handsome reward for keeping his wits about him in a critical moment.

Conscience Money. "Conscience money" in Great Britain now amounts to thousands of pounds annually. The first sum noticed was on March 30, 1789, when £360 was carried to the public account in onsequence of a note received by the chancellor. The writer with troubled soul implored him, "as an honest man, to consider the money the property of the nation and to be so just as to apply it to the use of the state in such a manner that the nation may not suffer by its having been detained and thus to ease the conscience of an honest man."

MONROE EDGE ANNIE'S BIRTHDAY GIFT

A Story of Blackmail and Its Results.

The village clock was striking the hour of 5 one afternoon as Annie Graham stepped out of her trim and comfortable cottage to meet her husband at the gate. She made a pleasant picture for the eye to rest upon. Her year of married life had been a very happy one, and never did maiden look more eagerly for her lover than did she for her hus band's return from the distant city. whither he had gone a week ago on business for his employers. Among the few ornaments she wore was a beautifully chased gold bracelet which encircled her left wrist. As her eye eaught its gleam a peaceful smile lit up her sweet face, for it was her husband's gift to her on her last birth-

She stood at the gate and looked down the road in the direction of the small mining village through which her husband must pass on his way from the station. A man's form came into view on the quiet road, but a single glance sufficed to show her that it was not the familiar figure she looked for. She scarcely observed the man further, her eyes traveling beyond him to scan the road, till he halted almost at her side. "Can't you spare a copper for a poor fellow who has walked all the way - he began, with the usual plea and whine of the prefessional tramp, from"but stopped abruptly and gave vent to a low whistle. "So it's you!" he exclaimed sneeringly, recovering from his surprise. Aren't you glad to see an old pal?" She looked at him for a moment, then drew back in fear. "I suppose you've got too high and mighty for the likes of me," he continued, observing her action. "I heard you had got spliced to the gaffer of a mine somewhere about this quarter, but had no idea of such a slice of luck as this happy meeting with you. So this is where you hang out, eh? purse which she handed to him. They amounted to only half a dollar, and he was dissatisfied. "I'm as dry "s a dusty road in June, sequences to himself, the surgeon gave and this will hardly wet my throat. Let's see that bauble on your wrist. It should be worth something." he said, looking greedily at the bracelet. "No, indeed, I will not. I have already given you more than enough, so please go." "Not if I know a thing or two," he said, with a cunning leer. "Did you tell your adorable husband that you got the swop from Watson's for nabbing a trinket like that? No, I guess not.

"You know how false that charge was," she cried indignantly, but with fear in her eyes at the mention of her busband.

"Oh, of course you say so, but who would believe you?" he returned. "Hand over that bit of jewelry, and mum's the word."

thing or nothing." She eagerly scanned the road again. Yonder at last was the well known stalwart figure of her husband. Should she tell him all and trust to his believing in her innocence? What if he should believe this man's story?

These thoughts passed quickly through her mind. The risk of losing his love and respect seemed too great to face. She slipped the bracelet from her wrist and handed it to the man.

"There, take it and go quickly," she said, with white, drawn face. He snatched it from her and walked away, humming a lively air and looking the virtuous man he claimed to be as he passed her husband a short distance from the gate.

John Graham greeted his young wife affectionately, and together they entered the house. He observed her pallor for the first time as she turned up the light of the dining room lamp.
"What's the matter, Annie?" he inquired anxiously. "You look as if you had got a fright. Have you been moping in my absence? I meant to be back a couple of days sooner, but I could not get my business finished in time."

"It is nothing. John. I did weary for your coming, and I am glad to see you home again," she said, with an effort to keep the tremor out of her voice.

"I have news for you, dear," he said when they were seated at the ear ble. "I met some of my percity and was invite appeared to be hold branch of peace the smoothed ove ciously cond. marrying, an are coming on the 2 days with us.

A Quick Witted Dector,

A certain French surgeon, of whom The Young Ladies' Journal tells, had so much more thought for his patient than for his own safety on one eccasion that he resorted to an expedient which at though efficacious, might have resulted in his own death.

He had been commissioned to bleed the grand seignior and either through amidity or nervousness had met with an awkward accident. The point of the lancet broke off in the vein, and the blood would not flow.

That point must be got out somehow Without stopping to consider the consequences to himself, the surgeon gave his highness a violent slap in the face. This produced the desired effect, for surprise and indignation on the part of his august patient put the blood into violent circulation. The vein bled freely, and the lancet point came out.

The bystanders were about to lay hands on the surgeon when he said, "First let me finish the operation and bandage the wound." This done, he threw himself at the feet of the sultan and explained his action.

The sultan not only pardoned him, but gave him a handsome reward for keeping his wits about him in a critical Conscience Money.

"Conscience money" in Great Britain now amounts to thousands of pounds annually. The first sum noticed was on March 30, 1789, when £360 was carried to the public account in onse quence of a note received by the chancellor. The writer with troubled soul implored him, "as an honest man, to consider the money the property of the nation and to be so just as to apply it to the use of the state in such a manner that the nation may not suffer by its having been detained and thus to ease the conscience of an honest man."

She made a pleasant picture for the eye to rest upon. Her year of married life had been a very happy one, and never did maiden look more eagerly for her lover than did she for her hus band's return from the distant city. whither he had gone a week ago on business for his employers.

Among the few ornaments she wore was a beautifully chased gold bracelet which encircled her left wrist. As her eye caught its gleam a peaceful smile lit up her sweet face, for it was her husband's gift to her on her last birth-

She stood at the gate and looked down the road in the direction of the small mining village through which her husband must pass on his way from the station. A man's form came into view on the quiet road, but a single glance sufficed to show her that it was not the familiar figure she looked for. She scarcely observed the man further, her eyes traveling beyond him to scan the road, till be halted almost

"So it's you!" he exclaimed sneeringaren't you glad to see an old pal?"

She looked at him for a moment, then drew back in fear.

"I suppose you've got too high and mighty for the likes of me," he continued, observing her action. "I heard you had got spliced to the gaffer of a mine somewhere about this quarter, but had no idea of such a slice of luck as this happy meeting with you. So this is where you hang out, eh? He examined the contents of the purse which she handed to him. They amounted to only half a dollar, and he was dissatisfied.

"I'm as dry 28 a dusty road in June, and this will hardly wet my throat. Let's see that bauble on your wrist. It should be worth something." he said, looking greedily at the bracelet.

Yonder at last was the well known stalwart figure of her husband. Should she tell him all and trust to his believing in her innocence? What if he should believe this man's story? These thoughts passed quickly through her mind. The risk of losing his love and respect seemed too great to face. She slipped the bracelet from her wrist and handed it to the man. "There, take it and go quickly," she said, with white, drawn face.

He snatched it from her and walked away, humming a lively air and looking the virtuous man he claimed to be as he passed her husband a short distance from the gate.

John Graham greeted his young wife affectionately, and together they entered the house. He observed her pallor for the first time as she turned up the light of the dining room lamp.
"What's the matter, Annie?" he inquired anxiously. "You look as if you had got a fright. Have you been moping in my absence? I meant to be back a couple of days sooner, but I could not get my business finished in time." "It is nothing. John. I did weary for e London Companies Have Old A Simple Little Trick at Once Effeetive and Mysterious.

Here is a trick that is always effective, and, while it is very simple indeed, still it is bound to appear just a wee bit mysterious, and many, especially your little brothers and sisters, will be unable to explain it.

Take two ordinary claret glasses and fill one to the brim with claret and the other equally full with clear water. Cover the top of the glass containing water with an ordinary visiting card so that there are no places around the edge uncovered by the card. Turn the glass upside down and place it on the top of the glass containing claret and adjust the glasses so that their edges meet exactly all the way around.

Now move the card slightly to one side so that there will be a little space at one side of the glasses inside uncovered by a card. At once a thin stream of claret will begin to rise through this space, not mixing with the water at all, but its edges clear and sharply defined. The water, too, will begin to descend into the glass containing the claret, a pure, glistening white stream against the ruddy red.

The stream of claret, too, rising through the sparkling white of the water presents a beautiful effect, and in a moment the claret will begin to spread about the top of the upper glass like the unfolding of a red rose and the water will spread in the bottom of the lower glass. The two fluids will not mix, but will present a delightful contrast of red and white with sharply de-

In a very short time the claret and water will have changed places, the claret being in the upper glass and the water in the lower. This is due to the difference in weight of the liquids; water, being the heavier, forces itself into the lower glass, and a portion of the claret is moved up to take the place of the descending water.-New York Her-

The doctors told him that the high altitude of that state would benefit him. He remained in Colorado nearly a year and then found himself as badly off as when he left Yonkers. After he had made up his mind that nothing could cure him and that he might as well die at home as among strangers he met an old tinker, who gave him the remedy, which cured him in three months.

Glass, an associate editor, and Vick, business manager, of the Quarterly last year, are attending the A & M. Storms, Hoeflich, Zambrano, Krompas and Kivlen; all old Academy boys, are in attendance at the same institution.

Craig, Beckham and Miller ate Thanksgiving turkey at their homes in Hearne.

The Academy has enrolled the largest number of pupils this year in its history. Two states and Mexico are represented.

A. D. Robinson, '00, has a position with Nash, Robinson, & Co., at Mart, from Navasota, has taken a course in in music, and his children (two sons bookkeeping, and now holds the re- and two daughters). The professor sponsible position of bookkeeper for Mistrot Bros. at Huntsville.

H. L. Yates, '00 honor man, was chosen to deliver the welcome address at the annual reunion of Camp this year at making brooms for his J. B. Walker at Madisonville the father at Mumford. If Bob succeeds past summer. As he is wont, Lee acquitted himself nobly, indeed.

Every one, especially the baseball boys, were very sorry to have Roy Buchanan withdraw from school to accept a position at Norwood's. We are glad to know that Roy will be with us again after Christmas.

On the day of the Forepaugh & Sells Bros. circus, October 8, we ere given a holiday from 9:30 until y hall hours. All the boys "took and say what they didn't see

Rev. Burrows, a preacher from Mississippi, who has recently come to Texas to join the Texas Methodist Conference, conducted the opening exercises for us one morning of the past month. We welcome Mr. Burrows to our state, and, whenever he is in Bryan, we will be glad to have him drop in.

K. J. Kivlen, Jr., one of our old boys from Dallas, who entered the A. & M. this year, has been appointed to a cadetship at the United States Military Academy at West Point. We congratulate Kearney on his good fortune, and hope he will be able to pass the required physical and literary examinations.

Lewis B. Willis, our last year's baseball pitcher, who enlisted in the army to go to the Philippines, is now stationed in Alaska. We hoped last year that he could write us some articles on "Hot Times in the Philippines." Since he did not go to the Philippines, we hope to have him treat us this year with articles on "Cold Times in Alaska."

The scholarship, which Allen Academy offered to the most popular young man at the Central Texas Fair, was won by Mr. J. R. Zimmerman of Tabor. There were three candidates, J. R. Zimmerman, Elmer Yates, and Rev. G. A. Foster. Zimmerman received a plurality of 179.

We were glad to have Rev. C. A. Hooper, presiding elder of this district, and Rev. E. L. Shettles, pastor of the First Methodist church of of the First Methodist church of Bryan, with us one morning of the past quarter to conduct the opening exercises. After the reading of a chapter and a prayer by Rev. Hooper. Rev. Shettles made a short and instructive talk on the kind of literature boys should read. We are glad to have any of the pastors with us, and wish they would come oftener.

The First Annual Central Texas Fair held at Bryan, November 5, 6 and 7, was a grand success. The attendance was large, the races good, the live stock exhibit exceeded our expectations, the balloon ascensions, roping contests and football game drew their share of attention, the textile, culinary and art exhibits were fine, and the merchants' displays were good. Allen Academy was represented by a voting booth, which received many compliment

T visitor asked for the first secretary, who, unfortunately, was on leave in England. The woman said that the second secretary would do as well, but he happened to be in attendance upon his wife, who was in a hospital.

Was the third secretary there? He was on leave too. The bottle washer might be in, perchance? No. He was shooting in England. The second bottle washer? He, unfortunately, was an invalid and rarely came to the em- Comp bassy. The military attache? He was on leave. The archivist? He was fishing in Scotland.

The visitor had heard of two junior secretaries, whose custom it was to transact their duties in company with a pet bear. Did they happen to be in? Unfortunately, they were away playing polo. And the bear? Yes, the bear was at home. The visitor, however, did not feel equal to interviewing the bear single handed and left.-London Truth.

Monumental Brasse

At the beginning of the thirteenth century it occurred to some one to preserve the likeness of his departed friend, as well as the symbols of his rank and station. So effigies were introduced upon the surface of the slabs and were carved flat, but ere fift; years had passed away the art of th sculptor produced magnificent monu mental effigies. Knights and nobb lie clad in armor with their ladies their sides, bishops and abbots b the spectators with their uplifted hands, judges lie in their official and merchants with the emble usually having some heraldic horrible things that come out of the forest, are not there? Well, so it is there in South America. There is a background of danger. One must keep one's eyes open. Here in England nature is safe and kind, eh? You can play with her as if she were an old tab-by cat, but out there she is a striped tiger, beautiful and fierce and never to be trusted.

"There is everlasting strangling going on in the woods. Even the flowers are not kind and harmless. The crchids twist and perch and swing and bloom on branches they are hugging to death. You break a twig of something that looks like a vine, and its milk raises a blister on your hand; you touch what you think is a leaf, and it gallops off on a hundred legs! The animals pretend to be vegetables and the vegetables to be animals. Every living thing is trying to protect itself with all its little might and main and to get the better of its enemies, just as the people in towns do. Oh, the high woods of the Andes are not moral, they are not Christian, I assure you! Nature is opulent, and she is splendid, but she isn't good."-"The Alien," by F. F. Montresor.
